Commission

December performance aligned with expectations, with total commission down 28% for the first 14 days compared to last month, reflecting the typical seasonal slowdown

While the decline was expected, the 28% decrease exceeds last year's seasonal pattern, when commissions fell by a more moderate 20% compared to November (2024).

This is due to some factors

10	FundedNext Futures Futures	$4,505	-26.6% vs last month	$-1,629

My Funded Futures was the primary contributor to the steeper decline this December compared to last year. The re-attribution of some lifetime referrals back to the firm reduced our December earnings by approximately $25K, materially amplifying the overall downturn.

FundingPips ranked second as a contributor to the decline, driven by an exceptionally strong November performance ($25.8K), which created a wide month-over-month gap relative to December's results.

10	Top One Futures Futures	431	-28.5% vs last month	-172 checkouts

The decline in checkouts is primarily driven by reduced user trust in Funding Traders and Instant Funding, resulting in a significant overall downturn for PFM. This is evidenced by the sharp drop in checkout activity for both firms amid their ongoing issues.

A similar pattern was already observed with Funding Traders last month; combined with the recent decline from Instant Funding, this has resulted in an overall 10% month-over-month drop in checkouts

Closing Takeaway

December results followed expected seasonal patterns, with commissions down 28% versus November, largely driven by a small number of partner-specific factors rather than underlying demand. Platform fundamentals remain strong, with record growth in users and engagement, and the analytics team continues to closely monitor partner performance to ensure visibility and accurate reporting as activity naturally rebounds in January
